8. Measures for the Protection of Complainants / Whistleblowers / Witnesses and Confidentiality

8.1 Measures for the Protection of Complainants and Witnesses

8.1.1 In considering complaints, the classification of information and the protection of all related persons shall be carried out in accordance with the Official Information Confidentiality Regulations B.E. 2544 (2001). When a complaint is referred to a responsible authority for consideration, the information provider and complainant may be exposed to hardship or adverse consequences. Therefore, complaints alleging misconduct by government officials shall, at the preliminary stage, be treated as official confidential information. Anonymous complaints shall be considered only where supporting evidence, surrounding circumstances, or clearly identifiable witnesses are provided. In cases involving reports concerning influential persons, the name and address of the complainant shall be kept confidential. If such information cannot be concealed, the relevant authority shall be notified and appropriate protection shall be provided to the complainant. Supervisors shall exercise their discretion as appropriate to protect complainants, witnesses, and information providers involved in fact-finding or investigative proceedings from danger, retaliation, unfair treatment, or any adverse consequences arising from the complaint, testimony, or provision of information. Where the complaint identifies an accused person, protection shall be afforded to both the complainant and the accused, as the matter has not yet been verified and may involve false, malicious, or unfounded allegations that could cause hardship or damage. Where a complainant expressly requests confidentiality or non-disclosure of identity, the responsible authority shall not disclose the complainant's identity to the subject of the complaint or any related party.

8.1.2 Upon the submission of a complaint, complainants and witnesses shall not be subjected to any action that adversely affects their employment, duties, status, or livelihood. Where protective measures are deemed necessary, such as the separation of workplaces to prevent contact between complainants, witnesses, and the accused, such measures shall be implemented only with the consent of the complainant and witness.

8.1.3 Requests made by injured parties, complainants, or witnesses, such as requests for relocation, workplace transfer, or other protective or remedial measures, should be considered by the responsible person or authority as appropriate.

8.1.4 Complainants shall be protected from retaliation, harassment, intimidation, discrimination, or any form of unfair treatment arising from the filing of a complaint or the provision of information.

8.2 Measures for the Protection of the Accused

8.2.1 During the consideration of a complaint, the accused shall not be presumed guilty. The accused shall be treated fairly and afforded the same rights and treatment as any other person until the facts have been established and a determination has been made in accordance with applicable procedures.

8.2.2 The accused shall be given a full and fair opportunity to respond to the allegations and shall have the right to present explanations, documents, evidence, and witnesses in support of his or her defense.
